Some people are so ungrateful! Just think of all we've done for the Negro here in the South. He came to our land believing in pagen gods, voodoo and such. We taught him our religion. And now what happened! Why, over in Montgomery last year those Negroes took our own religious teachings and used them against us. . . . "Whatsoever shall smite thee on thy right cheek, turn to him the other also." (Matt. 5:39) Like I said, some folks ain't very gratful. There ought to be a law against that sort of thing, and we may just pass one right here in Mississippi, too. So there!

Oh, yes, the long talked about booklet should, REPEAT, SHOULD, be off the press by the last week in this month. Pardon the commercial, but it costs four-bits, and if you're taken in by this commercial, just send your name and address. Do not send money now. I'll try later to get it.

Charlottsville, Va. was founded 220 years ago, but the chance of it surving for another year is remote. And here's why: Already the town has in it Mrs. Sarah Patton Boyle, who has exercised her right as an American to say what she thinks, which she has done quite well. The latter part of this month Bill Faulkner is to take up residence in Charlottsville as the University's "writer in residence", whatever that is. What with the two, Bill and Mrs. Boyle, the town may be shaken to its foundations . . . may even blow up, who knows!

As to Mrs. Boyle, recently she received a card in the mail on which was depicted a person astride a rail, dripping with tar. Across the top was written: "I Hear You're Leaving Town." And across the bottom was written the name of a Charlottsville WCC leader. Mrs. Boyle replied:

"Thank you for the Hallmark Card. I'm touched that you cared enough to send the very best.

"However, your sending it was prompted by wishful thinking, I fear, as preparations for integration next fall keep me too busy to contemplate even a short trip out of town.

"But should circumstances beyond my control render such a trip necessary, I think my sentiments would resemble those of the man in the story who when taking a similar ride was heard to remark: 'You know, were it not for the honor of the thing, I think I'd rather walk'."

Congressional Sidelights

by

Wm. M. Colmer

Controversial New Congress

Pursuant to our custom of many years we are resuming this column in order to bring to our people in a forthright manner some of the sidelights and our interpretation of legislative and political happenings in this Capital of the world which are not ordinarily carried in the press.

Now that the new or 85th Congress has been organized by the Democrats by a narrow margin, the pattern of things to come is gradually but surely taking form.

It is obvious now that: 1. The session will be a bitter and controversial one, 2. There will be no tax relief. 3. There will be a continuation of high Government spending with little or no reduction in the National debt. This will continue if not increase deadly inflation. 4. The Eisenhower doctrine for the Midle East will receive Congressional endorsement in spite of partisan bickering. 5. A determined effort will be made to enact a civil rights program.

Civil Rights Legislation

It is to the civil rights program that we shall now briefly address ourselves.

Ever since former President Truman sent his message to the Congress recommending a civil rights (civil wrongs) program, there has been at each session of Congress a strong and concerted effort to enact the program into law. Throughout the Truman administration we Southerners in the House with the valuable backstage assistance of the Republican House Leadership were able to tie this legislation up in the Committee on Rules and thus prevent its reaching the floor of the House. We laways were aware of the fact that once it got to the Floor it would pass because of the pres-

Rambling About Progress —

Now Ain't It Wonderful!

Mississippi now ranks among the top ten in the nation in the production of oil and natural gas. Every time a Mississippian opens his window he can hear some political opportunist yelling "Seperate But Equal," and all the background music that goes with it. (All to the tune of Dixie.)

Reports are that Mississippi is rapidly equalizing school facilities. Perhaps that's true . . . but even if they were equal in every conceivable respect, then what would we have? Well, we would have separate but equal, true enough. But at what academic level is the important question; comparatively low is the real answer, but will we admit it to ourselves! Well, hardly.

Now, what has the oil and gas resources to do with the school situation? Just this: Mississippi could provide adequate schools, on an accepted national level, provided she took advantages of the situation.

And the situation is relatively simple. Companies are pumping oil out of the state in an ever increasing volumn. Gulf Oil, for example, has built a "family" pipeline from their field in south Mississippi to Mobile, Alabama. And now, by golly, they came up with a bit of information in a recent feature story in which they pointed out that their investment in the state amounts to 123 million bucks. That, insofar, as we can determine, includes the pipeline from Mississippi to Alabama.

All that is just delightfully wonderful . . . except for one thing: What, in reality, does Mississippi realize from the Gulf Oil investment? For all practical purposes, postively nothing. But what does Alabama and Louisiana realize from it? In a nut shell: High paying jobs for thousands of their residents.

But ain't progress wonderful!

Mississippi supplies the raw material for heavy industry and high paying jobs for her sister states, and at the same time tells the proximately ten million dollars anually in revenue from the sale of legalized whisky. Of greater interest is the fact that per capita consumption in DRY Mississippi is greater than it is in WET Alabama. And if we aren't badly mistaken, the volumn sold in DRY Mississippi is greater than the volumn in WET Alabama.

We reckon if we were so smart we'd be rich, but some things can be seen without any great degree of intelligence.

And one thing which seems quite glaring is the fact that Mississippi can't support separate but equal schools when in reality she can't support a single school system of any merit. Also apparent, it seems, is the fact that even if the state maintained a dual school system it would be worth next to nothing and would in a relatively short time be a disgrace to the nation. (Of course, we're quite a credit as of now, wouldn't you say?)

Since no one is likely to do anything about the potential revenue from natural resources and legalized liquor we may as well take it one point further and suggest that Mississippi leaglize gambling.

All we have to do is make a brief study of the State of Nevada to realize the potential revenues from legalized gambling. Nevada has one of the highest per pupil expenditures in the nation. (From all reports the churches in the state are better off too: There ain't so many of 'em.) In addition, the crime rate is less than the average, so we've been told. Crime drops increasingly with the more freedom a human being has to be a human being.

Referring again to the school situation here in Mississippi, we would like to point out that as of last year over 65% of the college graduates were headed out of Mississippi. In one college of which we know 82% of the graduates departed for greener pasturers. One wonders if their reasons for

Colmer Honored As 'Outstanding'

TO RECEIVE AWARD

Society Recognizes Contributions Made To Good Government

Cong. W. M. Colmer of Pascagoula will receive an award for outstanding contribution to good government at a Washington banquet Feb. 22.

Colmer, now serving his 13th term in Congress, will be one of two men honored by the American Good Government Society.

Second award will go to California's Republican William F. Knowland, Senate minority leader.

The society is a conservative non-profit educational organization, organized before World War II.

Two outstanding citizens are annually chosen for the award. For the past few years the winners have been a Democrat and a Republican, although they could be from the same party.

His choice for the award was based in part on:

His chairmanship of a planning committee that recommended domestic and foreign policy in the postwar period;

His efforts to balance the budget and halt the inflation spiral through the Southern conservative House group, of which he is the leader, and

His leadership of advocates of states' rights opposed to highly centralized federal government.

Among former winners of the award were Sen. Walter F. George of Georgia, treasury secretary George M. Humphrey.

Gen. Robert Wood, Rep. Howard Smith of Virginia, President Herbert Hoover, Gov. Allan Shivers of Texas, Sen. Robert A. Taft

State's Tree Farms Show Increase

A tree farm operated as a husband-wife partnership was among six new tree farms to be certified at the January meeting of the Mississippi Forestry Association, a state-wide membership organization which operates the tree farm program in Mississippi.

The partnership is operated by Mr. and Mrs. C. B. McNair of Leake County who have dedicated their fifty-acre timbered tract to growing trees on a continuous basis.

Other tree farms which were certified included those of Tommy Sanderson and J. D. Wise

. . . may even blow up, who knows!

As to Mrs. Boyle, recently she received a card in the mail on which was depicted a person astride a rail, dripping with tar. Across the top was written: "I Hear You're Leaving Town." And across the bottom was written the name of a Charlottsville WCC leader. Mrs. Boyle replied:

"Thank you for the Hallmark Card. I'm touched that you cared enough to send the very best.

"However, your sending it was prompted by wishful thinking, I fear, as preparations for integration next fall keep me too busy to contemplate even a short trip out of town.

"But should circumstances beyond my control render such a trip necessary, I think my sentiments would resemble those of the man in the story who when taking a similar ride was heard to remark: 'You know, were it not for the honor of the thing, I think I'd rather walk'."

As for me, I would like to point out that Mrs. Boyle is certainly a danger to our way of life, and proof enough is in the fact that the story she sent to the WCC gentleman was told by Abe Lincoln. And we know full well that Abe was a damn yankee. It is extreamely bad for our way of life when a pure, white, red-blooded Southern lady commences to quote a Yankee, and especially the one she quoted. Looks like to me she could have found something in the Bible, everyone else does.

Oh, well, Charlottsville and the University of Virginia have me best wishes.

At one time in the history of this nation, as has been.... in the history of all nations, grave robbing was fairly common. Such is no longer the case. One seldom hears of a grave being robbed. The apparent reason grave robbing has ceased to hold any attraction for anyone is because the government fairly well cleans us all before we're anywhere near dead. And it's getting worse, too. Indeed, I suspect very few persons are dying nowadays within their means.

Easton King of Pascagoula and I have come up with a bit of wisdom we'd like to pass on to anyone concerned. It is our decision that fate is cruel when she leaves a man without talent. And when a man is without talent and money that is crushing. But when a man finds himself without talent, money, and time, . . . why, he's a weekly newspaper editor. And we ought to know!

There is not a more noble word in the English language than "Friendship." It is a word denoting wonderous things, and down through the ages there have come stories of friendship which touch the human heart, warming it, making it mellow. But one of the darnest friendships I know about is between T. Shandy Easton King, Pascagoula, and Dr. J. Wesley Sliver, Oxford and me. Recently I arose at four one morning, drove a hundred miles to Pascagoula, picked up King, drove then to Oxford to visit with Jim Silver. That evening I anticipated a delightful round table discussion between friends, Jim having invited over several other persons. Boy, was it delightful! From eight 'till about one or two the next morning Jim Silver, every ten minutes asked: P. D., how do you make a living? He kept it up so long and so loud until finally one friend of his cornered him out of my hearing and asked in all seriousness: Jim, how does East make a living? The long and short of the whole thing was the low blow by Easton King, whom I had driven two hundred miles out of my way to pick up, whom I'd listened to all day long shouting at me, "Damnit! Slow down!" A friend whom I had allowed to pay all the expenses on the trip . . . indeed, my pal, a real friend. Said King: You want to know how P. D. lives? I'll tell you. He lives off me. Honestly, that's what he said and after all I'd done for him. Sure is funny how some folks look at business. Just because I'd been talking to him about doing my printing for nothing, he took that attitude. Friendship . . . the meaning of the word seems to have been changed, if ever it was known by King and Silver.

be made to enact a civil rights program.

Civil Rights Legislation

It is to the civil rights program that we shall now briefly address ourselves.

Ever since former President Truman sent his message to the Congress recommending a civil rights (civil wrongs) program, there has been at each session of Congress a strong and concerted effort to enact the program into law. Throughout the Truman administration we Southerners in the House with the valuable backstage assistance of the Republican House Leadership were able to tie this legislation up in the Committee on Rules and thus prevent its reaching the floor of the House. We laways were aware of the fact that once it got to the Floor it would pass because of the pressure of the NAACP, the CIO, the ADA, and other so-called liberal groups and people. However, last year the Republican high command set out deliberately to recapture the Negro vote which had literally been stolen from them by Presidents Roosevelt and Truman.

Since the Northern Democrats, yielding to the pressure of these groups, were practically unanimous in their support of this legislation, Southern Congressmen were left standing alone in their fight against these iniquitous force bills. As a result, the House Judiciary Committee and the House Rules Committee reported the civil rights bill to the floor of the House over the obstinate opposition of Southern members. However, we through the exercise of every conceivable parliamentary maneuver were able to prevent its passage in the House until the dying hours of the Congress. And it got over to the Senate too late for the proponents to make a determined fight to break a Southern filibuster in that body.

All-Out Effort

Profiting by the experience of the last session, the proponents of this legislation are now determined to start early. The plan is to report the bill out of the Judiciary Committee, without hearings. Then rush it through the Rules Committee, after which it will be given priority on the floor of the MEC PROJECT WINS AWARD—Oscar O. Wolfe, Jr., of Duncan, is shown holding a certificate of recognition given the Mississippi Economic Council's statewide national affairs forum by the American Society of Association Executives. The forum, held in 1955, was judged as one of the best projects by a statewide organization during the year. Mr. Wolfe was chairman of the committee in charge.

Last year, the same forum was awarded the George Washington Medal of Honor and a $50 cash award by the Freedoms Foundation of Valley Forge.

But ain't progress wonderful!

Mississippi supplies the raw material for heavy industry and high paying jobs for her sister states, and at the same time tells the world that she is going to have "separate but equal" schools and knowing full well that she can't afford a single school system worth a tinker's damn.

But don't let us mislead you. Gulf is only one; there are others.

Another source of revenue which could be had by the state is from legalized liquor. No, by golly, we all seem to have religion or something. (Of course, it really isn't. It's lack of foresight, which is, after all, a product of intelligence.)

It is interesting to note the fact that our neighboring state of Alabama grosses ap-

Mississippi leagalize gambling.

All we have to do is make a brief study of the State of Nevada to realize the potential revenues from legalized gambling. Nevada has one of the highest per pupil expenditures in the nation. (From all reports the churches in the state are better off too: There ain't so many of 'em.) In addition, the crime rate is less than the average, so we've been told. Referring again to the school situation here in Mississippi, we would like to point out that as of last year over 65% of the college graduates were headed out of Mississippi. In one college of which we know 82% of the graduates departed for greener pasturers. One wonders if their reasons for leaving are justified. Why, Mississippi has a guaranteed pay rate to teachers of $2400.00 per year. California, on the other hand, has a tempting $4200.00 per year guarantee to teachers. And from all records the difference is comparative in others fields.

Oh, well, progress . . . it's wonderful!

We are not yet prepared to suggest that Mississippi leagalize prostitution, but one could indeed see the possibility of great revenues from that source, too. However, it appears that the South itself has a monopoly there.

Progress . . . ain't it . . .?

From The Southern Farmer —

The Man With The Hammer

When is the South going to stop beating itself over the head with this race prejudice business? One thing is certain; it is not helping the South any. It is bad any way you look at it. It will destroy any man or people if indulged in long enough. It is keeping industry out of the South, and is causing our best young people to leave the South. Sixty-five per cent of white young people who graduate from Mississippi colleges leave the state every year and go elsewhere. You have to admit Mississippi is very generous in this, they spend probably $10,000 on some young fellow and he goes somewhere else and Mississippi gets nothing for its ten thousand dollars. Multiply that $10,000 by sixty-five per cent and you see how generous they are to some other States.

We hit ourselves on the head in other ways. The Southern white laborer is knocking himself out of better wages. The wages paid Negroes on farms sets the wages for every one whose work is dependent upon Southern agriculture. There is an old saying that you can't keep a man down in a ditch without staying down there with him in order to hold him down. The same is true in the cities of the South. Wages paid to Negroes set the wage levels, for the minimum is what everything above it is based on.

Holding the Negro down cost the white South dearly in tax burdens. If Negroes made more money they could carry a greater part of the tax burden. In Mississippi a few years ago there were 17 taxes levied against a home in building it. A tax for each window, a tax for a door, a tax for a bath tub, etc. The State was taking just about everything a man earned. Per capita income in the deep South is the lowest in the nation, while taxes are the highest. Farm income is the lowest and likewise wages are lowest.

The South has too long flayed itself with this whiplash. Its main victim is none other than itself. We make it difficult, if not impossible for our preachers to preach a full, pure Christian faith. We give our children a schooling held down by an undertow of crippling limitations. Here we are, living in the Nation, that the whole world looks to as its hope and chief reliance, to hold and obtain freedom, yet the teachers in Southern white schools dare not discuss freedom, or human rights.

The saddest part about this is that a vast number of Southern white people do not go along with this. They are silent, for they fear to speak out. But they are sick of it. A minister said recently to a friend, "I have been a prisoner of my conscience for tweney years."

The fact is the present situation in the five or six States of the so-called deep south is the work of a few people. Some of these are politicians who use the white-colored relation to promote themselves politically.

Some, who have had little in life, use the situation to bolster their sagging egos. Some use it to keep white workers and colored workers divided. These know if these two great groups ever get together their days of exploiting Southern labor would be ended. All in all there are plenty working at it, but still it is my belief that most of the people in these deep south States are loyal to the United States, they are really and truly Christians, and if it weren't for the leadership of a wrong-headed few, they would act much as people in other parts of this great land of freedom act.

As it is, the life of the average Southerner, is one long apology for the basic American institutions of human rights, equality and freedom.

Mississippi now leads the nation with 1076 farms totaling nearly two million acres. A large majority of these acres are owned by small landowners.

"Mississippi's rise to national leadership in number of tree farms during the past two years has given timber growers a new concept of our capacity to expand our timber growing capacity," F. B. Pittman, executive secretary of the Mississippi Forestry Association, stated.

He added that the Mississippi Forestry Association, working closely with the Mississippi Forestry Commission, forest industries and other interested agencies, has adopted a down-to-earth system of reaching both small and large timberland owners and selling them on the many benefits coming from tree farming.

To become a certified tree farmer, a landowner must protect his land from fire, establish a stand of commercial forest trees, manage the land for continuous production of forest crops and must agree to periodic inspections by representatives of the tree farm system.

Application for approval may be obtained from any agricultural worker or directly from the Mississippi Forestry Association, Jackson, Mississippi.

Medical Plan Now In Effect

The Dependents' Medical Care Act went into effect on December 7th, granting civilian medical care at government expense to two million dependents of uniformed American servicemen all over the world.

However, many dependents of Army personnel who are residing in Mississippi do not have the proper "Military Dependent's Identification Card" to present to a civilian hospital or doctor in order to get the free care.

Army dependents should contact the U. S. Army Military District of Mississippi at Jackson, Mississippi for details on this program. The necessary identification cards will be made available to those dependents who personally contact the military district and render proof of dependency.

The banquet is annually held on the anniversary of Washington's birth.

Scholorships Now Offered At MSC

Three science scholarships, totaling $2160, will be offered to Mississippi Southern College students by a local firm.

President William D. McCain disclosed today that Hercules Powder Co. plans to give three scholarships, worth $720 each, to outstanding science students.

Applicants for the scholarships will be judged on the basis of past performance and comprehensive testing in science.

Dr. J. R. Switzer, dean of studen twelface, is in charge of the student aid and scholarship committee.

Pointing out that high school seniors as well as college students are eligible for the awards, Switzer noted that a sub-committee will supervise the selection of students for the grants.

Telephone Users Up Is Report

There were 101 million telephones in the world at last count according to the publication "The World's Telephones" announced Mr. D. H. Presley, local manager for Southern Bell Telephone Company. This means there are two telephones now for every one in existence only 10 years ago.

A telephone user in Petal can call any of 97 million telephones, over 60 million in North America and some 41 million in other countries.

Overseas telephone service has just recently been extended to Ascension Island, Oman French Equatorial Africa, Kuwait, Jordan andSaudi Arabia.

More than half of the world's telephones, (56 million) are located in the United States, the birthplace of the telephone. The Bell Telephone System operates about 82 per cent of the telephones in this country. The remaining 18 per cent of America's telephones are operated by 4,600 private companies, not part of the Bell system.

Coming Celestial Attractions of 1957

To the growing number of people who watch the stars and keep up with celestial events as they occur, there will be several of interest this year. While there are no events so rare as to be the one in a lifetime type, they will attract considerable attention.

The celestial events include the parade of the planets which are the other members of our own solar family. They have been observed by the human race for untold generations. Many superstitions and erroneous beliefs about them arose before the invention of modern telescopes and other astronomical instruments. There are the usual eclipses, con junctions, occulations, and transits to be observed. All of these events have in times past caused much speculation and fear.

Evening And Morning Stars

Evening stars may be any planet visible to the un-aided eye anywhere in the sky during the evening. A similar situation in the morning produces a morning star. More often we regard only the bright planets in the west before midnight as evening stars and similarly those in the east after midnight as morning stars. The five planets which may appear as morning or evening stars are in order from the sun Mercury, Venus, Mars, Jupiter and Saturn.

Mercury is the one of these least frequently seen by the average observer. This is because it is so near the sun that it is visible for only a few days at a time when evening or morning star. Mercury appears as an evening or a morning star every 116 days, consequently it can appear as each three times per year. It is the evening star when furthest east of the sun about 15 April, 24 August, and 7 December. It is the morning star about 2 February, 1 June, and 25 September 1957 when furthest west of the sun. It is always near the sun.

Venus, being inside the earth's orbit, can never be more than four hours behind the sun or ahead of it. It is always in the west as an evening star and in the east as a morning star. After passing the sun, Venus appears as a morning or evening star near the sun and moves away from it for 4½ months, then returns, remaining east or west of the sun for about 9 months at a time. Venus is a morning star now for about three months. In April it passes the sun and will be an evening star the remainder of 1957.

Mars is an evening star now. Later Jupiter is visible in the eastern sky. Saturn is also visible in the eastern sky. Each of these will change positions and apparent directions of motions during the year.

Lunar And Solar Eclipses

There will be two eclipses of the sun and two of the moon during the year. As is usual, the eclipses of the moon will follow the eclipses of the sun by about two weeks. The eclipse of the sun always occurs just before the moon is new and the lunar eclipse occurs at full moon. The eclipses this year are of little interest because not visible to us.

The first solar eclipse is annular. This means the moon cannot hide the entire face of the sun because the moon is too far away from the earth. It occurs near sunset on 29 April and will be visible in the north-central and northwestern United States, Canada, and Alaska.

The lunar eclipse following it occurs on 13 May. The only part of the United States in which it will be visible will be the east coast.

The second solar eclipse will occur on 23 October. It will be visible in any part of the United States.

The second lunar eclipse will occur on 23 October. It will be visible to the Western United States but not to the eastern part.

Conjunctions, Occulations, Transits, And Seasons

Conjunctions or heavenly bodies is the near approach which makes them look like they are close together. The moon will pass near the visible planets each month. Venus and Mars will be very close on 11 July and Venue and Jupiter on 22 August. These will be very near the sun. Mars and Jupiter will be in close conjunction on 16 October. They will be less than ½ degree apart.

An occulation is the eclipsing of one heavenly body by another, as the moon coming between the earth and another planet. There will be an occulation of Saturn on occurrence. There was a transit of Mercury on 13 November 1953 and there will be another on 6 November 1960. A telescope will have to be used to see Mercury against the face of the sun.

Venus transits at long intervals. The last one was in 1882 and the next one will be in 2004. This is an event for the younger generation to anticipate.

Information On Social Security

By Luther N. Davis

The first benefits for disabled children over 18 will be paid under the Sociay Security system for January of 1957, Applications are now being received.

Under the new provision children who are disabled may receive Social Security benefits even after they reach age 18 if they were disabled before they are 18, are unmarried and are dependent on a live parent who is drawing Social Security benefits, or who were dependent on a deceased parent who could have been entitled to Social Security benefits. The term "parent" includes natural parent, step-parent or adopting parent.

It is not necessary that the child himself have any record of work under Social Security to be eligible for benefits as a disabled child. However, he must have a disability severe enough to prevent him from engaging in any substantial gainful activity. The disability must be medically determinable.

Disabled children over 18 who believe they qualify, or persons caring for them, should inquire regarding benefits at the Social Securit yoffice located in the Carpenters' Building in Hattiesburg.

The Social Security office has a supply of new booklets on the disability provisions of the Social Security law. Anyone requesting one by telephone call, letter, or visit may have one or more of these free booklets. The telephone number is JU 4-7501, the mailing address is P. O. Box 431.

INEPT JANITOR

San Marcos, Tex.—On her way to an early morning class, Robin Remington, Southwest Texas State College coed, thought she heard a mournful call for help as she passed the Fine Arts building. She saw a man peering out the second floor window. The man bashfully explained that he was a new janitor, who, on his first day of work, had gotten locked in the night before.

KILLED ON LAST DAY

Sonora, Calif.—Arthur Carlson, 56-year-old carpenter, was working his last day on the tridam project at the headwaters of the Atanislaus River. He went into a building at the bottom of the Canyon for a drink of water. A boulder, about 100 feet long and 30 feet wide, undermined by rains, suddenly slid 80 feet down the canyon wall and crushed the building, killing Carlson.

ing the year. As is usual, the eclipses of the moon will follow the eclipses of the sun by about two weeks. The eclipse of the sun always occurs just before the moon is new and the lunar eclipse occurs at full moon. The eclipses this year are of little interest because not visible to us.

The first solar eclipse is annular. This means the moon cannot hide the entire face of the sun because the moon is too far away from the earth. It occurs

The second lunar eclipse will occur on 23 October. It will be visible to the Western United States but not to the eastern part.

Conjunctions, Occulations, Transits, And Seasons

Conjunctions or heavenly bodies is the near approach which makes them look like they are close together. The moon will pass near the visible planets each month. Venus and Mars will be very close on 11 July and Venue and Jupiter on 22 August. These will be very near the sun. Mars and Jupiter will be in close conjunction on 16 October. They will be less than ½ degree apart.

An occulation is the eclipsing of one heavenly body by another, as the moon coming between the earth and another planet. There will be an occulation of Saturn on 31 August. This will be visible to most of the central and western United States.

A transit is the passing of an object across the face of the sun. Mercury will cross the sun on 5 May, 1957. This is an occasional occurrence. There was a transit of Mercury on 13 November 1953 and there will be another on 6 November 1960. A telescope will have to be used to see Mercury against the face of the sun.

Venus transits at long intervals. The last one was in 1882 and the next one will be in 2004. This is an event for the younger generation to anticipate.

Seasons o f1957

Spring begins 20 March, 3:17 p.m.; Summer begins 21 June, 10:21 a.m.; Autumn begins 23 September, 1:27 a.m.; and Winter begins 21 December, 8:49 p.m.

House where it will be pushed through with all possible speed. Since under the Rules of the House the weapon of the filibuster is not available to us and in view of the fact that the proponents have the votes to pass it, it is thought that it will pass the House within a week at the most. The program is further to then get it up in the Senate and make an all-out effort to break the Southern filibuster.

In other words it is generally agreed that the Leadership in both Houses of the Congres are agreed that the matter should be disposed of early in the session. To sum it up, the advocates of this legislation are determined. We in the South stand alone. We are face to face with the strongest, best organized, and most concerted threat we have yet had on these proposals.

Under the new provision children who are disabled may receive Social Security benefits even after they reach age 18 if under Social Security to be eligible for benefits as a disabled child. However, he must have a disability severe enough to prevent him from engaging in any substantial gainful activity. The disability must be medically determinable.

Disabled children over 18 who believe they qualify, or persons caring for them, should inquire regarding benefits at the Social Securit yoffice located in the Carpenters' Building in Hattiesburg.

The Social Security office has a supply of new booklets on the disability provisions of the Social Security law. Anyone requesting one by telephone call, letter, or visit may have one or more of these free booklets. The telephone number is JU 4-7501, the mailing address is P. O. Box 431.

...the CRUTCHES that will NEVER BE USED AGAIN

IT TAKES SO LITTLE LIBERTY
IN GOD WE TRUST
1946
MUCH!

All over America this year boys and girls will be running, jumping, romping at play. All over the nation children will be growing up sound and healthy and beautiful of body and limb—growing up to become, in their own turn, the parents of healthy, happy children. Yet it might well have been otherwise . . .

NEVER BE USED AGAIN

All over America this year boys and girls will be running, jumping, romping at play. All over the nation children will be growing up sound and healthy and beautiful of body and limb—growing up to become, in their own turn, the parents of healthy, happy children. Yet it might well have been otherwise . . .

It is difficult to estimate how many children will be spared the scourage of poliomyelitis through timely immunization by the Salk vaccine. In the space of a single generation, perhaps hundreds of thousands. Your support each year to the March of Dimes has helped make this miracle possible.

Yet much—very much—still remains to be done. Vaccines and immunization methods must be refined, improved, perfected. Millions of dosages of the serum itself must be manufactured and paid for. And meanwhile the care of those who still may contract the disease must go on—with costly respirators, iron lungs, nursing, therapy.

Now, more than ever before, you can truly help lick with money. For now you and your dimes and dollars are on the WINNING side. The enemy, Polio, is in retreat. THIS year you can help to destroy it utterly.

Help make this the BIG YEAR in the battle with the great Destroyer of American Youth . . . This year do your Part, (or just a little more than your part) to make 1957 the year of the Big Victory!
